Opening: “Betty Woodman: Breakfast At The Seashore Lunch In Antella” at Salon 94

A master of ceramic art, Betty Woodman exhibits a new body of work that combines 2-D and 3-D by displaying her clay vessels on shelves, mounted on paintings. In The Picnic she portrays the flattened perspective of dishes on a checkered tablecloth with black ceramic vessels placed to stand in front of the canvas, which rests on the floor rather than hanging on the wall. The 84-year-old artist adds some standalone glazed earthenware pieces and a wall assemblage of ceramic elements that simulate wallpaper in a show that's both sensual and smart.
