Purvis Young

Known for championing cutting-edge, emerging artists, collecting powerhouses the Rubell Family Collection are this year showing more than 100 paintings in the exhibition Purvis Young by the late American self-taught artist Purvis Young, who worked in Miami for his entire life. Relatively unknown for many years, Young's legacy was boosted recently by the Morgan Library & Museum in New York acquiring several works by from the Souls Grow Deep Foundation, an Atlanta-based collection of African American art from the south. This could be the last exhibition the Rubell family hosts in this current site, the Drug Enforcement Administration warehouse on NW 29th Street, before they open a museum in Allapattah next year.
